Six Baltimore Officers Charged in Death of Freddie Gray

(Reuters) Baltimore's chief prosecutor charged one police officer with murder on Friday and five others with lesser crimes in the death of a young black man who suffered a critical neck injury in the back of a police van, a case that fueled new anger over police conduct in black communities. The swift decision by Marilyn Mosby, who has been in the position only since January, to charge the six officers in the death of Freddie Gray caught many by surprise in a city that experienced its worst civil unrest in decades on Monday night. Mosby made her announcement hours after the Maryland state medical examiner had ruled the death a homicide and a day after police handed her office the findings of its internal review of Gray's April 12 arrest. Caesar R. Goodson Jr., a black officer who drove the police van, was charged with second-degree murder, an offense that carries a maximum penalty of 30 years in prison. All six officers - three black and three white, five men and one woman - posted bond after their arrest Friday and were released from custody. After a convulsive week, thousands of demonstrators marched through the majority black city on Friday evening, with many believing their mostly peaceful protests over two weeks had prompted Mosby's decision.

Boko Haram: Nigerian Army 'Frees Another 234 Women and Children'

(BBC News) Another 234 women and children have been rescued from Boko Haram militants in Nigeria, the military has announced. It said the operation took place on Thursday in the vast Sambisa forest - a militant hideout - in the north-east of the country. It was not immediately clear if any of more than 200 girls abducted from a school in Chibok in April 2014 were among those freed. Nearly 300 women and children were freed by the army earlier this week. While the army says they had been captured by Boko Haram, a local senator says the women and children previously released may have been residents of the area. The military earlier said it had destroyed 13 camps belonging to the Islamist insurgents in the Sambisa forest, which surrounds a reserve in Borno. Thousands have been killed in northern Nigeria since Boko Haram began its insurgency in 2009 to create an Islamic state. In February, Nigeria's military, backed by troops from neighboring countries, launched a major offensive against the Islamist fighters. It has recaptured much of the territory Boko Haram had taken in the previous year.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

High pressure will bring dry conditions to northwest California through the weekend with seasonable temperatures near the coast and inland temperatures above normal.

Medford Weather:

Mostly dry and warm weather will persist through Sunday. Today will be cooler than Friday as low level flow turns onshore. A weak elongated short wave trough over the forecast area will result in a slight chance of showers today and Sunday. On Monday, temperatures will be several degrees cooler as the marine influence increases over the area. A transition to a cooler and showery weather pattern will occur on Tuesday.

Reno Weather:

Temperatures will remain well above normal through this weekend. A weak low pressure trough will develop near the West Coast and move inland early next week. This will result in afternoon showers and thunderstorms each day into early next week. Temperatures will trend lower by midweek with the potential for an unsettled and cooler weather pattern.

San Francisco Weather:

The marine layer is around 1000 feet this morning with low clouds inside the Bay and most coastal valleys. This will lead to cooler temperatures for all locations this afternoon as the clouds slowly mix out through midday. Continued seasonable and dry weather is forecast for Sunday through Tuesday. An upper trough may approach the region the second half of next week and mix out the marine layer, but no rain is expected for the Bay Area.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Sacramento Weather:

Warm temperatures with a slight chance of mountain thunderstorms will continue through early next week. Cooler and possibly more unsettled weather will set in late next week.

Hanford Weather:

High pressure over the Desert Southwest will provide for above normal afternoon temperatures over the central California interior through early next week. Isolated showers and thunderstorms will be possible near the southern Sierra Crest each afternoon and evening with the remainder of the area remaining dry.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

The skies will be fair inland, but onshore flow will bring night to morning low clouds and fog to the coast through the weekend. A low will arrive on Sunday to deepen the overnight marine layer and cool temperatures. Then another low will approach on Thursday for increasing cloud coverage into the weekend. The temperatures next week will be a little below normal.

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

A weak low pressure system off the California coast will move slowly inland through Southern California on Sunday and Monday. This will bring cooling and increasing night and morning coastal low clouds and fog as the marine layer deepens and onshore flow strengthens. There is also a slight chance of afternoon and early evening thunderstorms on Monday, mainly for the mountains and deserts. Onshore flow will continue through the end of the week with below average temperatures for inland areas, gusty west winds in the mountains and deserts, and small chances for light precipitation around Thursday.

Southeast California Weather:

Dry southwest flow aloft will affect the area this weekend and we will see the start of a gradual cooling trend lowering high temperatures into the middle 90s by Sunday. The cooling trend will continue into early next week. Dry conditions are forecast for Wednesday into the latter half of next week, although a large upper low developing over the Western States will lead to further cooling along with an increase in afternoon breeziness.
